As part of that commitment, Progress has zero tolerance for modern slavery or human trafficking at any level of its organization, at any of its operations around the globe.

All employees within our group of companies and the Board of Directors must adhere to the Progress Code of Conduct, which sets forth Progress’ company values and ethical standards. Every employee and Board member must act in accordance with all local, state, federal, country and international laws, including laws prohibiting modern slavery and human trafficking. All employees certify on an annual basis that they have read and fully understand the Code of Conduct. Where legally permissible, the company conducts background checks on all its employees at the time of hire.

Progress has established high standards for ethical behavior from its suppliers and does not tolerate or condone slavery or human trafficking within its supply chain. Progress’ Supplier Guidelines (<https://www.progress.com/company/suppliers>) outline the requirements for becoming a Progress supplier. These guidelines require Progress’ suppliers to comply with all laws and regulations, including laws prohibiting modern slavery and human trafficking.

Progress is committed to conducting on-going assessments of modern slavery and human trafficking risks within its organization and amongst its suppliers. In addition, Progress’ Code of Conduct outlines the process for someone to report any concern that Progress has violated any law, and we urge anyone who is aware of any possible violation to submit a report.

This statement applies to all of Progress’ subsidiaries and their respective employees, officers, directors and suppliers. Progress operates in the United Kingdom and Australia through its subsidiaries, Progress Software Limited and Progress Software Proprietary Limited, respectively, and this statement has been approved by their respective directors.
